

In a Mixed-Up State

by Alexandra Fiona Dixon and Dave Shukan

On the following pages you will find one hundred pairs of definitions. The answers to each pair of definitions, taken together, will anagram to the name of either a state or a state capital, with one letter from one of the paired answers left over. Each capital and state name will be used exactly once. Write the answers, the state or capital name and the extra letter in the cells next to the definitions, as shown in the first entry on the definitions pages. Then, enter the extra letter into either the states grid, or the capitals grid, which are found on the last two pages. Finally, cross off the capital or state from the list below.

The extra letters for the states will yield a message, as will the extra letters for the capitals. Together, the two messages will clue a pair of final answers.
